Foreword

As the leading journal of political science in Taiwan, as well as in the Chinese world, the Taiwanese Journal of Political Science has always been striving to increase its visibility and impact in international academia. Accordingly, this Journal has started publishing bilingually since July 2018, and now invites scholars from around the world to submit their manuscripts either in Chinese or in English.

This special issue on 'Chinese responses to the EU Foreign Policy' is the first fruit of these new efforts. Presented at the workshop held in Groningen under the framework of U4, these three research papers have been peer-reviewed, revised and re-reviewed before being adopted by the board. Throughout this process, five other papers were dropped. Together, the selected three papers offer an insightful analysis of the normative and economic dimensions of the EU-Asian relationship.

I am very grateful to the guest editors and all members of the board for their collective efforts in making this English publication come true. In the immense sea of English publications, this special issue is extremely modest and even negligible; however, it may serve as a humble starting point towards a brilliant future for this Journal, and for all Chinese political science in the long term.
